Press Release

Praxis and Measure Twice Announce Alliance

Indianapolis, IN October 5, 2005 - Praxis Learning Networks LLC and Measure Twice LLC, creators of the PM Final software testing tool for project managers, today announced an agreement to jointly develop and market a new version of PM Final.

Under the terms of the agreement, Praxis will develop and maintain the question bank used in PM Final to test project managers in preparation for the Project Manager Professional (PMP®) certification exam. Measure Twice will focus on further developing the PM Final tool to provide greater capability for individuals and training organizations to track exam results, test by knowledge area, and build comprehensive content exams. The Praxis question bank has been completely redeveloped and aligned with the Project Management Institute's Project Management Body of Knowledge, Version 3.0.

"With new content and a tougher passing score for the PMP®, tools like PM Final will be an essential component of any test preparation strategy", said Ken Jones, Managing Member of Praxis. "We will be fully integrating this tool into our classroom training and offer it to students who choose self-study."

"It is important for Measure Twice to team up with an organization like Praxis" said Jeff Campbell, President of Measure Twice. "This lets us focus on creating great software while Praxis develops and maintains the knowledgebase that is so critical to the success of a testing tool like PM Final. Both companies are able to focus on their strengths and generate cross marketing opportunities."

Praxis will begin using PMFinal Version 3.0 in its October PMP® Boot Camp class. PM Final will be available for sale to individuals and training organizations starting today. Single user prices start at $175 including shipping with volume discounts available.
